Meeting the Dynamic Needs of Southeast Asia's Food and Beverage Industry

Southeast Asia's food and beverage industry has witnessed a remarkable surge in demand due to population growth and increased income.

This has ushered in changes in consumption patterns, making widespread adoption of temperature-controlled transportation systems imperative. The rapid growth of restaurant chains, convenience stores, supermarkets, and e-commerce has also played a pivotal role in this transformation. Globally, the cold chain logistics market is projected to grow from USD 242 billion in 2021 to USD 647 billion by 2028, representing a CAGR of 15.1%.
